Grandma and Jess' Day Out

Jess left the house holding Grandma's hand tightly. They walked a little way up the street and joined the back of the queue. After a few minutes, the young man at the front of the queue put his hand out. The rest of the queue of people clambered on board and bought tickets. Grandma had a pass so didn't need to pay. It was full downstairs so they had to go upstairs where they found a seat and sat down. Jess looked out of the window, happily watching the traffic and looking at the shop windows. It wasn't long before they reached the town centre. "This is our stop!" said Grandma.
